Bate Thomas came near being the victim of a very serious accident Monday. He had been looking after his affairs at the plantation and having finished his duties prepared to return to town. The horse he was riding is a young thing, not thoroughly broken to saddle and as Mr. Thomas attempted to mount the spirited animal reared and fell backward. Seeing what was coming Mr. Thomas sprang to one side and fell to the ground, the horse in falling missed him but a few inches. As it was the saddle struck Mr. Thomas across the lower leg and bruised him painfully. Notwithstanding the accident Mr. Thomas mounted the horse and rode him to town.
